

Memory Games for Kids

Get the Picture?

Try one or both of these variations of easy-to-use memory games for kids. One child can play these with adult supervision, or groups of students can play them in the classroom. Either way, kids are getting some fun practice with memory skills.

Variation 1:

1) Give the player(s) a copy of the game board. Allow them to study the objects and their placements for 90 seconds.

2) Put the game board away.

3) Give the player(s) this new game board with several missing objects.

4) In each blank space, instruct the player(s) to either draw the missing object or to write a word to describe it.

5) After several minutes, reveal the original game board so that players can check their work.

Optional scoring:

Award three points for each correctly-placed item. Subtract one point for each incorrect item.

Variation 2:

1) Give the player(s) a copy of the game board. Allow them to study the objects and their placements for 90 seconds.

2) Put the game board away.

3) Ask the player(s) these questions. Players may answer orally or in writing.

- a) How many pictures were on the page?
- b) What picture was on the top left corner?
- c) What picture was in the bottom right corner?
- d) How many animals were on the page?
- e) What were the animals?
- f) Which of these pictures was not on the page? drum, eggs, rug
- g) What item was above the lock?
- h) What was next to the pan?

4) When finished, reveal the original game board so that players can check their work.
